According to the United Nations, there are an estimated 828 million people who are undernourished. That's one in nine people on the planet. And while hunger is a complex issue with no easy solutions, there are many things that can be done to help.

One way to make a difference is to donate food to a local food bank or soup kitchen. Food banks and soup kitchens rely on donations from individuals and businesses to provide food to those in need. Even a small donation can make a big difference.

Another way to help is to volunteer your time at a local food bank or soup kitchen. Volunteers can help with a variety of tasks, such as sorting and packing food, serving meals, and cleaning up. Volunteering is a great way to give back to your community and make a difference in the lives of others.

If you're not able to donate food or volunteer your time, there are other ways you can help. You can spread the word about hunger by talking to your friends and family about it, or you can write to your local elected officials and ask them to support policies that address hunger.

No matter how you choose to get involved, every little bit helps. Here are just a few ideas to get you started:

- Donate food to a local food bank or soup kitchen.
- Volunteer your time at a local food bank or soup kitchen.
- Spread the word about hunger by talking to your friends and family about it.
- Write to your local elected officials and ask them to support policies that address hunger.
- Support organizations that are working to fight hunger.
- Educate yourself about the issue of hunger.
- Be a role model for others by making healthy eating choices.
- Be a mindful consumer and avoid wasting food.
- Be a voice for those who are hungry.
- Never give up hope.

By working together, we can create a world where everyone has enough to eat.
