History of the Schnarrs

The Schnarr family first came to Bute Inlet in the late 1800s. John Schnarr, the patriarch of the family, was a trapper and guide who was known for his skills in hunting and trapping. He and his wife, Mary, had 12 children, many of whom also became trappers and guides.

The Schnarrs played a vital role in the development of Bute Inlet. They helped to establish the first trails and cabins in the area, and they guided many expeditions into the wilderness. They also played a key role in the conservation of Bute Inlet, helping to protect the area from logging and other development.

The Schnarrs Today

The Schnarrs continue to live in Bute Inlet today. They are still involved in trapping and guiding, and they also own and operate a lodge and guiding service. The Schnarrs are proud of their heritage and they are committed to preserving the traditions of their family.
