Despite the hardships he faced, Dawit never lost hope. He knew that he had to make a better life for himself and his family.

After arriving in the United States, Dawit worked hard to learn English and get a good education. He eventually became a successful businessman.

But Dawit never forgot his roots. He remembered the struggles he faced as a refugee, and he wanted to help others who were going through similar experiences.

In 2009, Dawit founded the Dawit Sium Foundation, a non-profit organization that provides shoes to underprivileged children around the world.

The foundation has distributed over 20,000 pairs of shoes to children in need. The shoes are more than just a gift; they are a symbol of hope and faith.

From Barefoot Refugee to Successful Businessman

Dawit Sium was born in Ethiopia in 1972. His father was a farmer and his mother was a homemaker. Dawit had a happy childhood, but his life changed dramatically when the Ethiopian Civil War broke out in 1974.

The war tore Ethiopia apart. Dawit's family was forced to flee their home and live in a refugee camp in Kenya. Life in the camp was difficult. There was little food and water, and the refugees were often sick.

Despite the hardships, Dawit never lost hope. He knew that he had to make a better life for himself and his family.

After the war ended, Dawit and his family were able to return to Ethiopia. However, the country was still in chaos. There was no work, and the economy was in shambles.

In 1991, Dawit decided to leave Ethiopia and seek a better life in the United States. He arrived in the US with nothing but the clothes on his back.

Dawit didn't speak English, and he had no job. But he was determined to succeed. He worked hard to learn English and get a good education.

In 2002, Dawit graduated from college with a degree in business administration. He then started his own business, a clothing store.

Dawit's business was successful, and he was able to achieve the American dream. But he never forgot his roots.
