O'Connor was born in 1930 in El Paso, Texas. She graduated from Stanford University Law School in 1952 and then worked as a lawyer in private practice and as a prosecutor in the Maricopa County Attorney's Office in Phoenix, Arizona.

In 1974, O'Connor was appointed to the Arizona Court of Appeals by Governor Jack Williams. She served on the court for four years, and in 1979, she was appointed to the Supreme Court by President Jimmy Carter.

Ginsburg was born in 1933 in Brooklyn, New York. She graduated from Columbia University Law School in 1959 and then worked as a lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU).

In 1980, Ginsburg was appointed to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit by President Jimmy Carter. She served on the court for 13 years, and in 1993, she was appointed to the Supreme Court by President Bill Clinton.

O'Connor and Ginsburg were both pioneers in the field of law. O'Connor was the first woman to serve on the Supreme Court, and Ginsburg was the second.

Both women also had a significant impact on American law. O'Connor was a moderate conservative who often cast the deciding vote in closely divided cases.

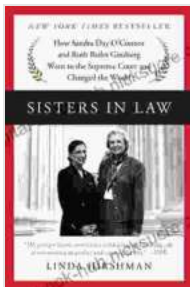

Ginsburg was a liberal who was a strong advocate for gender equality. She wrote several landmark opinions that advanced the rights of women, including the majority opinion in the 1996 case United States v. Virginia, which struck down the Virginia Military Institute's male-only admissions policy.

O'Connor and Ginsburg are both considered to be among the most influential Supreme Court justices in history. Their stories are an inspiration
