Symbolism, a late 19th-century art movement, sought to convey emotions, ideas, and spiritual experiences through the use of symbols, allegorical figures, and evocative atmospheres. Artists like Alexander believed that art should transcend the boundaries of mere representation and delve into the realms of the subconscious, the intuitive, and the transcendental.

Alexander's Symbolist paintings are characterized by their ethereal beauty, dreamlike imagery, and meticulous attention to detail. Through his brushstrokes, he created worlds where reality and imagination intertwined, inviting viewers to embark on a journey of introspection and contemplation.
